1. BURMESE PREMIER TO INVITE SOVIET LEADERS TO VISIT BURMA

Comment

Nu's invitation is probably motivated by a genuine desire to promote friendly relations with the USSR and to emphasize that Burma adheres to its neutral foreign policy. The Burmese government may also believe it can exploit a visit of top Soviet leaders to deter local Communists from continuing insurrection against a government on cordial terms with both Moscow and Peiping.

Bulganin and Khrushchev will almost certainly accept Nu's invitation in the hope of intensifying neutralist sentiment in Asia. Last July, Bulganin hinted to the Indonesian ambassador that he would be receptive to an invitation to visit Indonesia as part of a proposed trip to "India and other Asian countries."

2. COMMENT ON INDONESIAN ELECTIONS

[Redacted]

Unofficial returns from non-Javanese districts have improved the position of the Masjumi. It is now running second, with the Communists in fourth place. The latest returns, which account for 90 percent of the estimated vote, give the National Party 27 percent, the Masjumi 23.1 percent, the Nahdlatul Ulama 23 percent, and the Communist Party 21 percent. Minor parties accounted for the remainder.

A Djakarta daily which frequently reflects National Party policies has criticized Western observers for assuming the Nationalists would establish a coalition government with the Communists. It stated there were more important political groups in Indonesia than the Communists with which the National Party was willing to work.

The district election committee in central Java reportedly has ordered new elections in five cities because of alleged irregularities. As many as 3,000,000 votes may be involved. Both the National and Communist Parties did well in this area and undoubtedly will contest the legality of this order.

3. COMMENT ON NEW GREEK CABINET

Prime Minister Karamanlis' cabinet, which was announced on 6 October, is comprised exclusively of members of the Greek Rally. Several of the members are holdovers from the Papagos cabinet, but the party's "old guard" is not represented.

Parliamentary attacks on the new government may come not only from the regular opposition but also from some of the slighted Rally elements, particularly the faction of former foreign minister Stephanopoulos. Nevertheless, with the strong support of the king, a vote of confidence is expected. Initial reports of public opinion on the government are favorable.

Changes in the cabinet may be expected as Karamanlis consolidates his position and prepares for the eventual showdown at the polls.
